Message from the OPCA President

Pest management is a great industry, but it has inherent risks. There are micro risks, such as spills, personal injury, vehicle accidents, and property damage, which we must navigate daily while trying to protect our clients from unwanted infestations. There are other risks though; ones that are on a larger, more macro scale. Large scope lawsuits, pesticide bans, disease outbreaks, and threats from environmental groups all have the potential for industry changing outcomes. Another such risk is that of unfavorable legislation.

In Oregon, we have dealt with poor legislation in the past. Our association has worked with Oregonians for Food and Shelter (OFS) to have boots on the ground in Salem, advocating for our industry. IPM in schools, aerial application ban in Lincoln County, and the threat of restricting neonicotinoids are all issues that have been battled over recently. California got very close to banning second generation anticoagulant rodenticides earlier this year and our state tends to follow our neighbor to the south. The OPCA board agreed unanimously that we need available resources for fighting unfavorable state legislation.

Wildlife Seminar Set for January, 2019

A two-day wildlife seminar is planned for January 25-26, 2019 at the Evergreen Savings Bear Hotel in Grants Pass. Many of you know the location as it’s the same location as the OPCA Southern Oregon Seminar. The event is being organized by Dave Mays at Bugs Northwest in Grants Pass.

Friday’s seminar is an eight hour bat course that provides NWCOA certification. The next day, Stephen VanTassel will give a five hour training on cage and trapping techniques, damage inspection and control of turf-damaging animals.

The cost for Friday is $185 and Saturday’s course is $145. To register for the seminar, contact Dave Mays at Bugs Northwest at 541-787-5010.

Pacific NW Pest Management Conference Names Speakers

The annual Pacific Northwest Pest Management Conference is all set for February 28-March 2, 2019. Speakers include Dr. Laurel Hansen, Bobbi Corrigan and Dr. Dini Miller. Also, the event has a great raffle fundraiser, so if you’re going, take part in that! Register at www.pnwpmc.org.
Need Some OPCA Swag?

Show pride in your association with OPCA logo items!

OPCA purchased a small batch of flex fit hats, uniform patches and truck decals. These items are available on OPCA’s website.

We only wanted to get a small batch of hats for now, but if they are popular the cost will come down if we buy a larger supply.

We also have a limited number of OPCA hooded sweatshirts and T-shirts. Mostly mediums and XXX large. But, they are only $5.00!

Contact OPCA at 503-363-4345 or visit our website for more information at www.opca.org.

NPMA Offers Executive Leadership Program

NPMA’s success is contingent on our ability to work in the best interests of our membership, which includes companies of all sizes. In order to accomplish this, we seek guidance from our Board of Directors and committees, which are made up of member volunteers. NPMA is committed to encouraging its membership to embrace diversity and inclusion as an integral part in nurturing winning workplace cultures throughout our industry. Hearing from different voices plays an important role in accomplishing NPMA’s goals. However, limited resources often make it difficult for aspiring leaders to become involved in association leadership.

"The ELP Program has really opened up my eyes into the inner workings of the NPMA. I've learned to be a better leader and connected with some of the industry's elite that have opened up their doors to me. The friendships I have made over the course of the year have proven to be some of the most valuable. I will be forever grateful for the opportunity extended to me by the NPMA to be part of this group."

Jeff King, The Pest Rangers

ELP 2017

What is the Curriculum?

The curriculum is designed to provide the program participants with the tools they need to be future leaders within the organization.

Participants will…

Work with a mentor on personal and business growth;

Receive soft skills training such as Networking, executive etiquette, and unconscious bias;

Be able to communicate NPMA’s purpose, history and goal areas;

Attend NPMA events in order to participate in committee meetings and network with industry leaders;

Utilize NPMA member benefits to grow their businesses and help their colleagues, and Serve on NPMA committees; and participate in monthly conference calls.

For that reason, we voted earlier this year to create a Legislation Action Fund. This budget line item will be a reserve used solely to combat unfavorable state legislation. We plan to slowly build this fund to help safeguard our industry. To accomplish this goal, we decided to add a small $20 fee to extracurricular activities (golfing, fishing, rafting, etc.) that are part of our High Desert and Fall Beach seminars. This increase will begin with June’s conference at Eagle Crest. There is also opportunity to donate to the fund directly if a member feels inclined to do so.

We hope that by starting earlier, before there is immediate need, we will have resources in the future to maintain the health of our industry and keep it thriving. This is a vital concern and a risk that every Pest Management Professional should take seriously. If you have any questions regarding the Legislation Action Fund or any other association issues, please reach out to me.

OPCA Scholarship Applications Due April 30

OPCA is proud to be able to offer scholarships! The scholarship award will be $1,000. Applications are due April 30th. Questions about the scholarship should be directed to Rene Kesecker, Scholarship Committee Chair, 541-753-7233. Scholarship applications can be found on the OPCA website under the “Members” tab.

To be eligible, the applicant must be an owner, an immediate family member, employee, child, stepchild of an employee, or employee’s spouse of an OPCA member firm. The applicant must be nominated from a current OPCA member firm whose active membership has been in good standing a minimum of three consecutive years.

Graduating high school seniors, other high school graduates and applicants with G.E.D equivalent will be considered. The applicant must attend an accredited college university, trade school, or institute of higher learning. Also, transcripts may be requested if required by the institution to which the applicant has applied.

This is a great opportunity for young people to underwrite their success. OPCA is proud to be able to offer scholarships through the generous donations of our members.
Government Affairs Update

Dahlman to Leave OFS

A significant change is coming to OFS. After several years of service, Scott Dahlman will be leaving to take a west coast regulatory position with FMC Corporation.

While this is an exciting opportunity for Scott and his family, it is a loss for the OFS team. Scott’s collaborative nature, technical resources and writing skills will not only be missed by OFS, but also by its sister organizations including OPCA. On a positive note, Scott wants to stay engaged with OFS in a member company role.

Scott’s last day with OFS will be December 21st. His departure creates a significant hole OFS moves toward the 2019 Legislative session. The OFS executive committee will be meeting next week to discuss the transition and options.

Please join OFS congratulating Scott on this exciting opportunity! Questions, contact Katie Fast, Exec. Director, Oregonians for Food & Shelter (OFS) 503.370.8092, katie@ofsonline.org

Oregonians Will Dig Deeper to Fund Brown's Budget

The Capitol Press, December 4, 2018, SALEM — Thousands of Oregonians could see more money taken out of their paychecks and companies would be writing bigger checks to fund Gov. Kate Brown’s proposed budget and revamp the state’s education system.

Brown needs to find $2.6 billion more than is already being paid in state taxes to cover her proposals for the state’s next two-year budget. It’s likely much of that sum would come from corporate or personal income tax increases.

Currently, individual taxpayers are projected to pay $19 billion in state income taxes the next two years. And corporations are projected to pay another $1.1 billion.

The governor for the most part has been quiet about where she’s going to get the new money. She has proposed increasing a variety of taxes other than income taxes, but that gives her about one-third of what she needs to cover her proposed spending.

The details on who would pay are yet to come.

“The governor will be engaged in working with those who will be proposing ideas, which includes the business community, Legislature and other stakeholders across the state,” said Chris Pair, Brown’s communications director.

“It’s going to be a challenge,” the governor said last week when she announced her budget plan. “I don’t think it’s going to be easy, but I do think it’s work worth doing and attempting to do.”

House Speaker Tina Kotek, D-Portland, said she wants to raise “sustainable” revenue for the education plan through corporate or personal income taxes.

“If we’re going to have the resources we need, you have to look at the big things,” Kotek said.

Pushing tax increases through the Legislature could technically be easier for Democrats, who now have a supermajority of votes in the House and Senate.

Kotek said that’s no guarantee that tax changes would pass easily.

Critics already are pushing back on the idea that Oregonians need to be taxed more.

House Republican Leader Carl Wilson of Grants Pass, called the governor’s budget a “call to drastically increase taxes on everyday Oregonians.” He noted the state already is forecast to take in an extra $1 billion in the next biennium without changing tax rates. The governor’s move to take another $2 billion is a challenge, he said.

“It is a challenge to the wallets and pocketbooks of hardworking Oregonians,” Wilson said.

Jason Williams, the executive director of the Taxpayer Association of Oregon, also was critical.

“No amount of tax revenues” could fix what he called a “leaky” budget.

While he said that the governor’s plan to hire more internal auditors could help identify government waste, that would only be effective if the state cut wasteful programs.

The state has made minor changes to income taxes in recent years.

In 2017, these included a new payroll tax to help pay for transportation projects, and changes to how certain corporations apportion income — simply put, how they figure out what they owe to Oregon when they pay their taxes.

Brown’s budget already includes $769 million in increased taxes, largely the result of a work group figuring out how to cover the state’s $623 million bill the next biennium to cover Medicaid, the government health care program for the poor and other qualifying groups.

Health care is costing the state more money — not because the care itself is getting more expensive, but because the federal government is covering less of the bill than it used to.

A mix of tobacco and business taxes would cover the Medicaid cost, state officials said.

“The governor for the most part has been quiet about where she’s going to get the new money. She has proposed increasing a variety of taxes other than income taxes, but that gives her about one-third of what she needs to cover her proposed spending.

Southern Oregon Seminar, Grants Pass November 16

The Bear Hotel hosted our seminar on November 16. Thanks to Dave Mays and his staff at Bugs NW for helping with the breakfast and coffee!

The winner of the big raffle prize walked out with a Yeti Cooler. Several other prizes were raffled off.

Also we had a great lunch from Casa Amiga catering. Over 70 people attended the event that also featured 6 exhibitors. Mark your calendar for Nov. 15, 2019. We’ll be back!

Looks like the Bear Hotel might need some rodent control help. I think we might know somebody!
